Homeschooler's Day at Woodlands Nature Station

Land Between the Lakes , Ky./Tenn. - April 6, 2018 - Woodlands Nature Station at Land Between the Lakes hosts Homeschoolers' Day on April 27, from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Home educators and their families can spend a day learning all about biodiversity. A two-hour visit is recommended, and everyone is welcome. All programs are included with regular admission: ages 13 and up $5, ages 5-12 $3, ages 4 and under are free. For more information, call Nature Station at 270-924-2299 or see our Homeschoolers' Day Flyer. "This year's theme is Biodiversity University, giving homeschoolers the opportunity to study the variety of species in our area." Says Nickolaus Willis, naturalist as Woodlands Nature Station. "We will have hands-on activities, hikes, and live animal programs that will incorporate science, technology, literature, art, and mathematics as we explore our local flora and fauna. Your homeschooler will have a fun and exciting day learning about their local biodiversity."

Homeschoolers' Day activities include:
- Nature Hikes
- "Pond Prowl" aquatic life activity
- Phonics Scavenger Hunt
- Close encounters with native animals
- "Life in a Log" decomposer activity
- Citizen Science Projects
- Leaf Rubbing Craft
- Charting Critters Craft

April is Homeschoolers' Month at Woodlands Nature Station, take advantage of unique learning opportunities, hands-on exploration activities, and take-home materials. Everyone is invited to participate. Pick up a Nature Discovery Activity Book at Nature Station and complete the fun exploration activities to earn a Nature Discovery patch and certificate.
